The grand jury of the Washington County Court are now in session, and are very busy investigating violations of the liquor law. About a landred witnesses were summoned from the capital during last week, to testify as to where they procured their maturinal cockstalls, noon nips and evening night-caps. The list included gentlemen of all classes of society both "great and sma", and the result was a loathing on their part for Montpelier and its generally interesting attractions. The Central Vermont Railroad profited much by the disposal of excursion tickets, and a large majority of the summoned are now stopping with the landlords of most of the "brandy and watering places" in this section. The grand jury, however, act very mean; they adjourned over on Friday until Monday, hoping to catch some of these frightened gentlemen who may come home disgusted at the size of their hotel bills to go to church with their wives and children.—Burliagton Free Press.
